HEADQUARTERS OPENED HERE BY REPUBLICANS

Commodious Quarters Secured in Bank of Charleroi Building

WILL WAGE CAMPAIGN

Charleroi to be Valley Center---Chairman Clark And Party Are Visitors

Republican headquarters were opened today in what is known as the old postoffice rooms in the Bank of Charleroi building. From this time forth rooms will be open to all each week day or evening, and the campaign in this part of the Monongahela valley will be conducted from here. The Charleroi headquarters will be a branch of the county headquarters at washington.

The quarters this year are more commodious than the Charleroi Republican organization has ever had. A man has been placed in charge, and a general invitation is being extended to all persons along the valley to visit and inspect them. Literature has been provided. Courteous treatment will be accorded all visitors

Those who looked to the opening of the Republican headquarters are also planning for at least one rally to be held in Charleroi, at which time noted men will meet voters and speak to them. There will be no waning of the campaign from this time forth, and it will be carried to a hot finish.

County Chairman Norman E. Clark of Washington, Secretary Alvin E. Donnon and C. E. Carothers, of Washington were here Friday evening and met several local Republicans. They inspected the headquarters. The party has been on a tour of certain parts of the conty.

SETTLEMENT IN CHARLEROI CASE

In the assigned estate of Frank and Rosalie Fagula, of Charleroi, the first and final account of the Charleroi Savings & Trust Co., has been filed. The assignee states that it learned, upon taking charge of the estate, there would be very little or nothing for the unsecured creditors. The assignors owned considerable real estate, encumbered by mortgages and judgments. Book accounts from their store were turned over to the amount of $417.32. Of this sum only $32.54 could be collected. The balance of the book acoounts was sold for $5. About $135 in rent was collected, but expended in repairs. Other requirements were taken care of by the assignee. The assignee charges itself with sums to the amount of $18-125.84. This was all paid out in satisfaction of mortgages and judgments and other debts.

Edward Myers Sues Borough Because of Injuries

HURT WITH A CABLE

Edward Myers has filed a suit for $10,000 damages against the borough of Marianna for personal injuries sustained on Beeson avenue, in that borough. These injuries were received when the plaintiff came in contact with an iron cable that is used by the Pittsburg-Buffalo Co., between coal tracks along that thoroughfare, for propelling coal cars.

It is set forth that the cable, which operates the cars along the coal track to the side of Beeson avenue, had a habit of jumping off the track and lying upon the sidewalk. It is averred the pulleys were worn out and there was no guard attached or any means or device used for keeping the cable in place upon the track.

It is further alleged that the borough was negligent, in that it knew of the condition of this cable and the danger incurred by it jumping off onto the sidewalk, and in failing to cause the same to be fixed.

It was while passing along Beeson avenue that the plaintiff was caught by this cable and sustained serious injuries.

WENT TO SLEEP AND THEN LOST HIS WAD

Godfrey was deprived of his personal liberty Friday evening and placed in jail at Monongahela. He will be given a hearing before Justice Kelley this evening. It is stated that the men had been drinking.

ALLEGED ILLEGAL SELLERS ARE HELD

Bentleyville Men Must Answer to Grand Jury on Charges of Dispensing Liquor Without License

As an afterpath of the 12 raids on houses of suspected illegal liquor sellers at Bentleyville last Monday, 10 foreigners were held for court following the hearings before Alderman R. L. Ellwood at his office Friday afternoon. Two of the suspects, John Smith and Tony Dellvella, were discharged because of lack of evidence against them. Of the other 10 only three furnished the required bail of $500. The seven who could not furnish bail will be taken to the county jail in Washington this morning.

In the hearing of the liquor cases, many witnesses testified that they had purchased intoxicating liquors at the suspected places practically all summer.

Detectives Joseph Brenkus, Harry charges gave testimony. Assistant District Attorney T. H. W. Fergus. Farmeon and Wade Ford along with Constable Jerico who preferred the paid a high compliment to the men who had brought about the general cleaning up of the alleged liquor selling conditions.

The following defendants furnished bail: Joe Martin, Mary Corenia, and Rosie Obzetz. The others, who were committed to jail, were Victor Salsi, Steve Zece, Mike Chren, George Zoe, Joe Doich, Joe Zec, and Joe Povlich.

The raid was the biggest one ever made in Washington county, each of the 12 persons arrested representing one raided establishment. In the prosecution of these cases it is believed a great step has been taken in the cleaning up of the county.

Gress, of the schools and Principal Nathan Phillips of high school colors. Each girl who was in fice and talked in a fatherly manner with them.

"Now girls won't you remove them"? it is said they asked.

"No," it is rumored the answer came emphatically, "If you want them removed, remove them yourself."

After arriving in Baltimore he thought of his mother worrying over his disappearance and went to the police and told them where he was from. The police immediately notified his parents.

TODAY IS THE LAST DAY TO PAY TAXES

Every voter who expects to vote on November 3 must have his taxes paid today. This is the last chance. If challenged a voter is without recourse unless he has paid a state and county tax within a period of two years. If a man has paid his taxes for last year but has not paid this, he still can vote. The state and county or personal tax is a small sum of money, but it is declared many neglect to pay it ,either through carelessness or indifference.

PAYS TO WATCH THE PENNIES

Real Explanation of Why Some Men Are Wealthy, and Others Are Directly the Reverse.

It is a habit that a rich man assumes to pick up a penny whenever or wherever they can conveniently, and sometimes they will go out of their way to do so. I remember when I was a small boy, that was nearly fifty years ago, a very wealthy man in our city came driving along toward a high overhead railroad bridge. I was playing with some companions of mine on the bridge.

I cannot exactly remember why it was done, but I fished a penny out of my pocket and was showing it to my boy companions when it slipped through my fingers and dropped to the pavement below. The wealthy old man drove up, and to all appearances he was in deep thought with his head buried upon his chest.

He saw my penny, however, deliberately stopped his horse, getting out of his carriage, picked up that penny, pocketed it, and returning to his wagon drove off as if nothing had ever happened.

There was a sad heart pulsing over his head, I can tell you, for a penny in those days was as big as a dime is to a boy today, and I felt the loss of it keenly. That man was a multi-millionaire, and by just such little things as that was how he was constantly accumulating more all of the time.

The average boy of today does not take advantage of his opportunities to make and to save. There seem to be too many forms of temptation thrown in his way to rid him of his extra dimes and nickels, when if they were saved and deposited in some savings institution a startling result would be achieved in a few years.—Portland Express and Advertiser.

DRAMA FOUND IN EVERYTHING

Philosophical Tribute to the Morbidly Curious, Who Are Subject to Much Criticism.

Dickens noted in his day—as I in mine—how casual people in the street would flatten their noses against the window of a chemist's shop in order to catch a glimpse of some little surgical repair which the victim of a trivial accident might be undergoing in the back parlor.

"Morbid curiosity," says the superior person, who may none the less have taken his own measures to become acquainted with each gory detail. The superior person is notoriously short sighted and may even be said to wear blinkers; the nose flatteners are not, perhaps, articulate, and can give no philosophical description of the promptings which move them, but they are swayed, however, unconsciously, by the excitation of their dramatic sense.

They are doing reverence, though ignorant, to the foundation truth that there is drama in everything and even in nothing.—Percy Clare, in London Chronicle.

The Perpetual Blunderer.

Ever meet the affable gentleman who smilingly confesses that he has made a mistake in some matter or other and is really and profoundly regretful—won't you forgive him—and bear the penalty of his blunder yourself, like a jolly fellow? Fine, gentle-mannered, valuable acquaintance, isn't he—this fellow with the infinite capacity for blundering and the generous capacity to apologize and leave you to hold the bag, puzzled to know just why you grasped hold of the thing? Afterward you regret meeting him and try to transfer your business elsewhere, don't you? Of course, all of us make mistakes in judgment and action—and most of us are quite ready to condone the occasional lapse from accuracy—but what shall we do with the fellow whose blunders average 90 per cent or more? Where is his place in the business system of the world? Ought he not, as a mark of appreciation, be given a job driving a garbage wagon?

Woodchuck "Bile 'Em Fust."

Horace Kephart once asked old Uncle Bob Flowers, one of his neighbors in the Smokies: "Did you ever eat a woodchuck?"

"Reckon I don't know what them is."

"Ground-hog."

"O, la! dozens of 'em. The red ones hain't good, but the gray ones! Man, they'd jest make yer mouth water!"

"How do you cook them?"

"Cut the leetle red kernels out from ander their forelegs; then bile 'em fust—all the strong is left in the water—then pepper 'em and sage 'em, and put 'em in a pan and bake 'em to a nice rich brown, and—then I don't want nobody there but me!"—Buffalo News.

Beauty of Character.

There is a sweetness of the child, and a sweetness of the old. The sweetness of the child is largely independent of his personality. It is in his ways and in his looks, and the same thing is true, though not quite so much, of the young woman. But when sweetness comes at sixty it is the expression of the very nature of the soul. J. M. Barrie somewhere, we believe, has said that no woman is really beautiful until she is fifty-three. The beauty that is worth most is the beauty that is connected with the character itself.—Selected.

Hunting Prohibited in Several Counties in Keystone State.

Notice was given by the state game commission Friday that five counties would be closed to deer hunting for five years from November 1 next, this action being taken under the act of 1913. The counties are Chester, Warren, Forest, Clarion and Jefferson. Last year Fayette, Somerset, Westmoreland and Cambria were closed to hunting for three years.

By the terms of the law, no deer may be hunted, and it is the intention to stock the counties with deer and to liberate in them animals which may be donated.

In the winter the game commission will locate six new game preserves on forest reservations. There are now six in existence.

Halt is Called on Slick Candidates

The attempts of certain candidates in Allegheny county and the state in general to pre-empt the name "Non-Partisan Party" for use in the November election will be contested in the courts. The argument will be made that such a party appellation is in conflict with the Baker ballot law, which provides that a name shall be used which might confuse the voter. As there is a non-partisan ballot for the election of judges, it will be charged that the use of the name "Non-Partisan Party" would be confusing to the voter.

In Allegheny county this argument will be supported by reference to the vote cast for Harry W. McIntash, candidate for district attorney at the last election. On the ballot of a "Non-Partisan Party" he received more than 15,000 votes. This, it is declared, demonstrates that the voters were confused. The additional argument will be made that having polled more than 15,000 votes at the last election which was more than 5 per cent of the total, the "Non-Partisan Party" should have made nominations at the primary this year and that nominations by nomination papers are therfore void.

MINERAL WEALTH IN BOLIVIA

United States Now in Position to Develop Natural Resources of the Country.

"The opening of the Panama canal will bring all the South American countries in closer touch with the United States and is bound to result in mutual profit," said J. H. Hobart of New York in an interview at Washington. "Bolivia is one of the countries in South America of which little is known here, but which is sure to be developed through being in closer touch with this country. There is no doubt that among the many industries to be established in Bolivia, gold mining is one that will be among the most lucrative. It was only a short time ago that Bolivia ignorant of the gold that lay hidden, started her efforts to develop her mines of tin, copper, silver, bismuth and tungsten, paying no attention to the more precious metal.

"Years ago, during the Spanish regime, the Spaniards took many thousands of dollars' worth of gold from the Bolivian mines. The fleet of Spain carried to Europe cargoes of gold which historians erroneously recorded as the product of Peru. The error was due to the fact that almost everything sent from the American continent to Spain had to pass through and be recorded in the office of the viceroy, who resided in Lima, and the error was the less noticeable because, under the reign of the Spaniards, the territory now known as Bolivia was called upper Peru.

"The day following the proclamation of independence, when the Spaniards took their departure, they took the precaution to close the entrances to all the mines, hoping to find them as they left them on their return. But the Spaniards never came back, and for a century the rich veins of gold, it is said, have been lost to mankind."

Wrong End of the Ticket.

Frank Wood, ticket clerk at Columbus, Ind., sold a ticket to a woman who expected to change from the Union station to the Chicago & North Western in Chicago. He noticed that she lingered near the window, looking at her ticket, showing it to a party of friends.

When asked to explain, she said: "Why, you know I have to transfer in Chicago, and it says right here at the top, 'this ticket is nontransferable.'"—Indianapolis News.

CREATore MAKES FRIENDS AT EXPO

Great Band Draws Crowds to Pittsburgh

Creatore, one of the most remarkable of all band leaders and his wonderful concert band is appearing at the Pittsburgh Exposition this week and will be the musical attraction at the Point until the close of Wednesday evening's concert, Oct. 7. This famous Italian organization, with its more famous leader, has been steadily advancing in the world of music and has commanded the earnest attention of the leading musical critics of the world. His concerts, four in number each day, bring out the most massive works of the old world masters. His band, the most flexible organization of brass and wood instruments ever organized, gives a touch of majesty to the selections that are rendered. The offerings from this organization during its brief engagement therefore make the Exposition a center of greater interest than usual, and the throngs who gather each day give evidence of the steadily increasing popularity of Creatore music. There is no way to compare Creatore, for he and and his band, are so different from all others that they stand alone. To hear this band is to receive impressions that never leave the mind.

The Exposition season this year has been a wonderfully interesting one and unusually successful. The exhibits including those of the government and the city of Pittsburgh, and the various educational, philanthropic and industrial organizations have never been better nor so varied. There are more free moving picture displays than ever before. There are more exhibits in which the visitor sees something actually being accomplished than ever before. There are more amusements and diversions than ever attempted at the Point, and this, added to the fact that there is included a $2 concert, all for the single admission fee of 25 cents, makes an impressive showing of the great work that the Exposition society is doing for the great community of western Pennsylvania.

Within the great Point buildings the visitors this year can watch a skilled diamond cutter and polisher at work on rough diamonds, just as they work in Amsterdam, Holland. There is to be seen, too, skilled workmen making wicker furniture in its latest designs. A model printing shop with typesetting machines, a model bakery, baking bread, blind girls weaving rag rugs and making rush bottoms and wood frames for stools; wireless experts operating a wireless plant and demonstrating this marvelous power of the twentieth century, a working model of the $10,000,000 filtration plant of the city of Pittsburgh, filtering water, and a moving exhibit of the steel corporation, demonstrating the safety appliances now in use in its great mills for preventing accidents, all tend to keep one's interest awake and keenly appreciative.

Following Creatore at the Exposition will come Walter Damrosch and the New York Symphony orchestra, the most perfectly organized and recently endowed symphony orchestra. This great organization opens Oct. 8 with a series of programs that will make the Exposition the mecca of the music loving public of all the great Pittsburgh district.

NEED OF PROTECTION

The crossing fatality at Uniontown where two persons were almost instantly killed and two others more or less seriously injured is another evidence of the need of better protection along the railroad and railway lines.

At the point where the accident occurred in Uniontown there is a sharp curve in the tracks of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. It is declared there is no protection and the curvature absolutely prohibits one from seeing an approaching train Other accidents attended by fatal consequences have happened at this crossing. One of them was that several years ago when the late Judge Ewing met death. Yet it seems there has been little movement toward improvement of conditions there. Someone is at fault.

The railroads are very anxious to obtain advances in their freight rates and their bill of complaints would fill a good sized book. Some of them are really progressive in adopting safety devices. This applies partly to the kind that concerns the control of legislatures and law making assemblies. It would seem that nothing is so maddening to a railroad as to have its bluff called.

For their earnest endeavors in compelling the use of safety appliances by their employes the railroads are to be commended. But while they are doing that it might not be a bad idea to add to the safety appliances.

There are few towns or small cities in Pennsylvania that do not have dangerous crossings. Usually they are unprotected. Not long ago in Charleroi a man was killed on the railroad. True, his death was due to his own carelessness, but he wouldn't have been careless had there been proper protecting devices at the railroad.

All there is to it, a sign "Stop Look and Listen," or one, "No Trespassing" is not going to answer. Better protection is demanded and every fatality emphasizes the fact.

REAL PROGRESS

The William Penn High school of Philadelphia has eliminated algebra from its curriculum. In commenting upon the action a prominent Philadelphia newspaper says:

"For many years it has been the aim of the principal of the school to get away from the traditional and conventional system of education and replace it with a live, vital and modern curriculum to meet the daily need of pupils after they have left school. The school has already established a reputation for progressiveness and has dared break through many of the old-time educational fetishes with successful results. It is gradually adopting a modernized and socialized system of training.

Would that more high schools throughout the country followed the example of the William Penn school says the New Castle Herald. Taken as a whole the high schools of the United States are burdened with methods of the old pattern shop. They are in the clutches of the "old-time educational fetishes." Many of them follow curiculum bound about by iron clad rules. Pupils are crammed with never ending Greek syntax and Latin construction. It seems to be the purpose to fit the subjects for classical college course when only a very small percentage of the graduates course.

The high schools would be of a far greater use and accomplish infinitely greater results if they would recognize the personality in a pupil and strive to foster that personality instead of perverting it May the day come soon when the old methods will be abolished and nigh educational ideals replace them.

PICKED UP IN PASSING

In the October American Magazine, George Fitch, the Illinois humorist, writes an amusing piece entiled "The Homeberg Telephone Exchange" in which he describes the telephone in a small village. In the following extract he explains why Carrie, the telephone operator, knows more than anyone else in town:

"When my wife wants to know if hats are being worn at an afternoon reception, she calls Carrie. Ten to one Carrie has caught a scrap of conversation over the line and knows. But if she hasn't, she will call up and find out. When a doctor leaves his office to make a call, he calls up Carrie and she faithfully pursues him through town and country all day, if necessary. When we are preparing for a journey we do not go down to the depot until we have called Carrie and found out if the train is on time. And when our babies wander away, we no longer run frantically up and down the street hunting for them. We ask Carrie to advertise for a child seven hand high, wearing a four-hour-old face wash; and within five minutes she has called up fifteen people in various parts of the town and has discovered that said child is playing Irdian in some back yard a few blocks away.

"Carrie is also our confidante. I hate to think of the number of things Carrie knows. Prowling into our lines while we are talking, as she does, in search of connections to take down, she overhears enough gossip to turn Homeberg into a hotbed on anarchy if she were to let it loose.

"But she doesn't. Carrie keeps all the secrets that a thousand other women can't. She knows what Mrs. Wimble Horn said to Mrs. Ackley over the line [illegible] so mad that the two hasn't spoken three years. She knows just who of our citizens telephone to Paynesville when Homeberg goes dry, and order books, shoes, eggs and hard boiled shirts from the saloons up there to be sent by express in a plain package. She knows who calls up Lutie Briggs every night or two from Paynesville, and young Alexander Bane would give worlds for the information, reserving only enough for a musket or some other dueling weapon.

"There's very little that Carrie doesn't know. I shudder to think what would hapepn if Carrie should get miffed and begin to divulge. Once we had a telephone girl who did this. She was a pert young thing who had come to town with her family a short time before. It was a mistake to hire her—telephone girls should be watched and tested for discretion from babyhood up—but our directors did it, and because she showed a passion for literature and gum and very little for work, they fired her in three months. She left with reluctance, but she talked with enthusiasm, and

WAR BULLETINS

Paris, Oct. 2—On the allies left wing one of the detachment which came out of Arras has fallen back a little. North of the Somme the allies have made progress in front of Albert. Between Roye and Lassigny the Germans have directed violent attacks, which have broken against the allies resistance. Quiet prevails along the rest of the front.

London, Oct. 3—A dispatch from Rome says: The Germans have suffered a terrible defeat in the provinces of Lodz and Suwalki, Russian Poland. The Germans were attacked with extreme violence and forced to flee from Suwalki, Ostrowiec and other towns, leaving behind quantities of transports and guns. Their troops threw away their rifles and baggage. It is said that the Germans have lost 30,000 in killed and wounded, and 20,000 in prisoners.

Berlin, Oct. 3.—The great battle in France is still undecided. The Germans are hammering the French positions at numerous points with their heavy artillery. The attempt of the allies to break through the Germans lines have been repulsed. The Germans continue to make steady progress. The Germans have silenced two of the Belgian forts in the fighting before Antwerp. Germans captured 30 areoplanes sent from France to Belgium. The Russian offensive movement against the Germans in the province of Suwalki has failed. About 2000 Russian officers are being held prisoners of war.

Bordeaux, Oct. 3.—The German cruisers Scharnhorst and Gneisenau bombarded and half destroyed Papeete, principal town and fort of the French island of Tahiti.

On the battle front, (via Paris), Oct. 3.— The French and British, who have been three weeks in the closest closest contact with the Germans feel that they have accomplished their task of preventing the Germans from breaking through their lines. The fury of the German onslaughts are unabated. The Germans find it impossible to penetrate the allies lines in the vicinity of Rheims and Scissons, transported many of their divisions farther northwest and hurled them against Roye. They failed again.

TO DEFY THE EARTHQUAKE

A Japanese professor, who has been giving the matter long and careful study, declares that 99 per cent of the loss of life and property in the fearful earthquake at Messina could have been avoided by proper construction of buildings in this known earthquake zone

No one can question Japan's right to instruct the world in the matter of "temblors." She has more of them than any other thickly settled region on earth, and yet she suffers comparatively small loss of life Her great recent disaster, be it remembered, was caused by a volcanic eruption, not an earthquake.

The architects of Nippon are said to pin their faith to wood as building material, save where foreign influence has become strong. The earthquake resisting qualities of good wooden construction are clear to all, but wood is too expensive to use in southern Europe and besides it brings in the other danger—fire

It looks as though those who insist on living where the earth shakes would have to adopt the American invention of steel skeleton construction, or go back to the old Greek plan, and build of stone with good-sized blocks, carefully rubbed joints and no mortar Steel ties a building together in spite of earthquake shocks; the dry joint of the old Greeks permits a certain amount of yielding without damage to the structure

Century-Enduring Bridges

If the United States has vanished like the Roman empire five centuries or ten centuries hence, any Chinese or other yellow antiquarians digging into the ruins of this city can find remarkable evidence of a golden age of monumental bridge builders right in Philadelphia asserted Chief Engineer George S. Webster of that city He issued a description of some comments on 90 such bridges constructed in recent years which will endure for centuries The same comments apply to sewers. He said

"The construction employed today, at a reasonable increase in first cost adds far more than proportionately to the beauty, permanence and final economy of the bridge

"Where the head room and foundations permit an arch bridge of concrete is built and this should last at least five centuries with possibly repairs to the lighter and more ornamental portions, such as the open balustrades, after, say, a century Bare steel is now used only where the weight of concrete is prohibitive."

MEMORY OF THE CIVIL WAR

Priest Shared Blanket With Puritan and Had an Idea the Angels Were Not Displeased

While the trouble in Mexico is inspiring patriotic emotions in those Americans who are zealous for their country's repute, and Civil war memories are being revived by the steadily diminishing survivors of that great struggle this story of the late Rev Joseph H Twichell is of peculiar interest it relates to the friendship existing between the Hartford pastor and a Roman Catholic priest who was his brother chaplain in a certain brigade of the northern army It occurred on the night of the battle of Fredericksburg Let the Protestant preacher tell it in his own way:

We had both been active for hours and by midnight were compelled to have sleep So we went to one side of the camp and lay down under the sky. It was very cold and we had only a blanket apiece. After a time Father O'Hagan called to me to ask if I were asleep

"No," said I. "It's so cold I can't get to sleep."

"Neither can I," retorted he. "Let's club our blankets"

We did, and we lay there side by side with two blankets over us instead of one. I was falling asleep when I felt him shaking beside me and asked what was the matter He was laughing softly and didn't answer for a moment. It seemed to me a queer place to laugh, for we were in the midst of hundreds of dead and wounded soldiers

"I'm laughing at us," he said finally. "Why, what do you mean?"

"Us two here—me a Jesuit priest, and you a Puritan parson—snuggled up here under the same blankets"

A minute or two passed and then he looked up into the sky and said quietly: "But I shouldn't wonder if the angels like to look at it"

MR. TAXPAYER!

Look Here; Read and Reflect!

Do you ever stop to estimate how much King Alcohol Costs Washington County? Well you would do well to do so. A very large part of the Tax you pay into the County Treasury you pay to take care of

THE RESULTS OF STRONG DRINK!

Just how much no one is able to say exactly, as the account on the county books is so involved with other accounts that it is impossible to separate them, so an estimate has to be made.

Fortunately there are many statistics being gathered in these days that help us to arrive at a fair estimate. For instance, in Massacnusetts in 1908 there was kept a complete record of all the arrests made in that state. It was learned that 60 per cent. were for drunkeness, and 94 per cent. of those who were arrested were habitual drinkers. The official report of the Allegheny Workhouse for last year (1913) shows that 3,798 prisoners were received, of whom only 316 were total abstainers. Over 91 per cent. were drinkers. In our county, the Prosecuting Attorney's office shows that 40 cent. of our criminality is caused solely by liquor, and liquor is a contributing cause to a very large percent of the rest.

Of the 12 homicides convicted in our county last year (1913) nine were excited to the killing by liquor. The coroner reports 19 homicides, and liquor the contributing cause in 15 of them.

In prohibition Kansas, recently 53 of the 105 counties had no prisoners in their jails; 65 counties had no prisoners in the penitentiary, and some have not had for ten years; 87 counties have no insane; 54 have no feeble minded; 96 have no inebriates, and 38 counties have no inmates in the poor house and have had none for about ten years.

How different in Washington County with our plenteous supply of breweries, distilleries, saloons, drinking clubs, agents and speakeasies. See our palatial jail, almost always filled to overflowing. See our fine County Home, too small for our need. See our new big Children's Home which is fast filling up. And we are told that we must straightway assess ourselves $300,000.00 additional to build a new insane asylum.

Here are the items of account of our county in caring for the crime, insanity, pauperism, and delinquency of children as published by the County Controller for 1913:

Court of Quarter Sessions, Fees and Mileage		$ 13,172.44
Justices and Constables		14,124.01
Jurors and Constables		17,392.47
Court House and Jail Expences $14,741,92. Half		7,370.96
Coroners Fees and Costs		3,077.48
County Home		33,283.48
Children's Home		15,161.11
Penal Institutions, Reformatories, &c		27,703.24
Insane and Feeble Minded		17,094.71
Indigent Soldiers		1,525.00
Jail Supplies		2,440.00
Justices Discharge Cases		1,800.00
Superintendent of Buildings. Half		950.00
Jail Physician		300.00
Juvenile Court Salaries		3,083.28
Prosecuting Attorneys		5,325.00
Sheriff		14,243.12
Poor Directors' Salaries		3,083.28
County Detective		1,457.65
Court Attendants, $4,800.00. Half		2,400.00
Clerk of Courts, $4,666.32. Half		2,333.16
Total direct expenditure		$189,521.06
But the county is carrying an investment that must be considered, for a good part of it is not paid for and the interest on it must be paid.
Court House, Jail and Grounds $1,000,000.00. Half	$500,000.00
County Home, Farm and Buildings	150,000.00
Children's Home, Farm and Buildings	75,000.00
Live Stock, Machinery, etc	8,500.00
Total	$733,500.00
The interest on this investment at 5 per cent would be		$ 27,506.35
Which added to the expenditure above would give a GRAND TOTAL OF		$217,027.31

Spent by the county last year for Crime, Pauperism, Insanity and child delinquency. Although statisticians are generally agreed that about 90 per cent. of crime is due to drink, for the sake of conservatism we will say 75 per cent. of this expense is due to drink.

This would make the EXPENSE DUE TO DRINK - $169,646.28

But, some will say, does not the liquor traffic pay into the county treasury in licenses large sums to help meet this expense? In 1913 they paid in $1,325.00; in 1912 they paid in $1,295.00. The total tax collected by the county last year was $499,517.69. You see, Mr. Taxpayer, that one-third of the good money you paid into the county treasury last year went to take care of the work of the liquor traffic. ARE YOU NOT BEGINNING TO GET YOUR EYES OPEN?

Mark you. This is not all that this business cost you. These figures do not include the cost to the several townships and boroughs and to private charity to take care of the alcohol victims. The salaries of the two judges, $14,000.00 per year, are not included, a good proportion of which is due to the liquor traffic. These salaries are paid by the state, but nevertheless by us.

Again, it is reasonably certain that our coal miners alone spend $5,000,000.00 a year for alcoholic liquor. This would buy them each year 2,000 much needed homes at $2,500.00 each and would add considerably to the taxable property of the county from year to year; but as it is it is worse than wasted by the miners and lost to the legitimate business of the county, and as a taxable asset.

Another point, while we are thinking of our county affairs. All experience demonstrates that wherever the liquor people have enough political power to keep themselves in business, not only political corruption abounds, but extravagance is introduced into the public expenditures. How is it in Pennsylvania? How is it in Washington county? One example. Are there not men in county office in this county who are getting thousands a year who would probably find it hard to find some other job that would pay them so many hundreds?

This is a part of the alcohol system, Mr. Taxpayer, and you are digging away trying to help pay for it.

IS IT NOT TIME FOR YOU TO STOP AWHILE AND THINK?

When you have thought this over you will probably try to shake off this incubus on the taxpayer and on the honest business of the county by refusing to be led by political bosses in county and state who are in league with the liquor traffic.

FOUND HER INTERESTING MAN

Young Lady Who Had Built Castles in the Air Somewhat Rudely Brought Down to Earth.

Friends of a Worcester young woman are forcing her to submit to considerable good-natured joking about her acquaintance with a youth whom she described as "the most interesting man she ever met." The girl was introduced to him at a recent social gathering and before they had talked together long he had her attentively listening to an account of his travels throughout the country, and his experiences in many different cities. He also alluded to his college life, and before they parted the girl had the idea that she had become acquainted with the son of a millionaire, or some dignitary.

She talked freely about him to her acquaintances, although not mentioning him by name. One day while with a young woman friend, she passed him on the street, and was surprised to see him bow to her companion.

"Do you know him?" asked the girl very much surprised.

"Sure," the other replied. "He used to be our paper-boy. He is now trying for a job on the police force."

The girl was surprised into admitting that he was "the interesting man," and what followed indicated it would be many days before she heard the last of it.—Worcester Post.

FOR ELIMINATION OF SMOKE

Firing Must Be Systematic and Properly Done If Best Results Are to Be Attained.

Smoke is caused by failure to burn the combustible gases that arise when fuel is exposed to the flame. The editor of Power describes these gases as "a complex mixture of various hydrocarbons, from some of which carbon separates on cooling in the form of lampblack or soot. The smokier fuels also give off tarry vapors, which condense and help to gather the carbon particles into flakes or 'smuts.'

"For the burning of these gases as they are evolved from the coal, three conditions must exist: Air must be supplied above the fuel bed, the temperature must be high enough to insure ignition, and there must be time or space for combustion before the mixing currents of gas and air are cooled by flowing into or among the tubes of the boiler."

Firing coal in large quantities produces so much gas that neither air supply nor combustion space is great enough for its burning. Therefore coal should be put on in small quantities at frequent intervals.

Leaning Tower of Pisa.

This celebrated bell-tower is situated in the city of Pisa, Italy, and was built during the twelfth century by the German architect, William of Innspruck. It is cylindrical in shape, 50 feet in diameter, 172 feet high, and leans about fourteen feet out of the perpendicular. It is entirely of white marble, and consists of seven stories divided by rows of columns. The top, which is surmounted by a flat roof and an open gallery, commanding a splendid view of the surrounding country, is reached by 300 steps. The tower was not originally intended to lean, but the foundation settled more on one side than on the other until it reached the present inclination, which it has maintained with scarcely any perceptible increase for hundreds of years. The upper part of the structure was built in a manner to counteract in part the inclination, and the grand chime of bells, seven in number, of which the largest alone weighs 12,000 pounds, is mounted with reference to counteract this fault still further.

Insatiable.

George A. Birmingham (Canon Hannay), the versatile Irish clergyman, playwright and novelist, was talking to a New York reporter about the American business man.

"I'll tell you a story," he said, "which hits off the American business man well.

"A wife, still young, turned from the window of her sumptuous nineteenth story apartment and said to her husband:

"'George, ten years ago you promised me that when you made a million you'd retire from business, and then we'd travel and enjoy life.'

"Here she began to cry.

"'You've got your million now!' she sobbed. 'Why do you still keep on working?'

"George, as he hurried into his overcoat, growled:

"'Ah, that's just like you—never satisfied!'"

How Plants Save Their Lives.

Many plants are equipped with wonderful weapons for their defense. The thorns of the rose bush, bramble and gorse prevent cows and horses from eating them, as well as keep off snails and slugs.

Cactus plants have a formidable armor of prickles and daggers. The plant known as the Spanish bayonet is armed with taper-pointed spears that have filelike edges.

Some plants, such as the ragged robin, have sticky stems covered with fine hairs, to which insects stick if they climb up to try to steal the honey.

The sun spurge has a poisonous juice which kills insects, while the poisonous properties of the deadly nightshade are well known. The bracken fern has such a bitter taste that goats and sheep will not eat it.

Gov. Tener Promises to be Present For Bridge Celebration

Positive announcement that Governor John K. Tener would be present at the formal bridge opening next Thursday at Brownsville was made Friday by George L. Moore, chairman of the bridge committee. Governor Tener and several members of his staff will arrive in Brownsville at 9 o'clock next Thursday morning and will lead the Washington county delegation in the industrial parade, which will be classed with the formal dedication of the new structure. Governor Tener will make a few remarks at the opening but will deliver an address Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, probably from the bridge.

For several weeks Mr. Moore has been in communication with Governor Tener. Secretary Gaither called Mr. Moore on the long distance telephone Friday and stated positively that Governor Tener had made all arrangements to be present at the bridge opening. With his staff and the officials of Fayette and Washington counties, Governor Tener will be entertained at dinner at the Pennsylvania House.

Plans for the centenial celebration are gradually shaping into form, and indications are now that thousands of visitors will be entertained during the week.

Burgess Dunlap believes in giving men a chance to work, and as no better place was available he sent them out to help clean the streets.

Anxious Astronomers Await Astral Visitor

training their big telescopes toward a region of the skies just south of the big dipper, where, still invisible to the naked eye, lurks a comet. Though the comet has been called after Delevan, the Argentine astronomer who discovered it about four months ago, there is a suspicion among the professional star-gazers that it is Westphal's comet, making another swing close to the earth after so many years' absence.

Charles Hudson, one of the assistants to Dr. Frank Schlesinger, director of the observatory, has been squinting quite studiously at the nebular wanderer nearly every night for the last several weeks, and he figures that it will be bright enough for all to see along about the latter part of the month. As it is now, the comet hovers almost too near the eastern horizon to be even a fit subject for magnified observation until the early hours of the morning.

A glimpse at the comet early last night through the big lens wasn't much for brilliancy, for, beside the difficulties of the range, there was too much moonlight. One saw simply a blurred, luminous ball about as big as one's fist and a long, tapering tail. Mr. Hudson said that his best views of the comet were such that the tail looked to be twice as long as the diameter of the moon.

DOGS UTILIZED IN WARFARE

Once Actual Participants in Hostilities, as Well as Made of Good Use in Other Ways.

"Dogs of war" is a phrase which once meant a thing as real as the war horse. Dogs have playe their part in battles and campaigns, and in the old wars between England and Scotland dogs were used by both combatants for pursuing and killing fugitives after a defeat. It is related that Wallace and Bruce each had close escapes from capture by English bloodhounds. Bruce is said to have thrown the English dog off the scent by the now well-known expedient of wading up a stream far enough to baffle his pursuers, and Wallace evaded the hounds by having recourse to a trick more or less common in those bloody times, of killing a follower and leaving the body in the dogs' path for them to come upon. The dogs finding a body believed that their task was done and discontinued the hunt.

In the history of the wars of the middle ages one finds reference to the use of big dogs against cavalry for the purpose of throwing the horses into confusion and not alone for causing panic but casualties, for these fierce canine partisans were clothed in coats of mail studded with spikes and having scythes fitted to their harness.

Instances are recorded where war dogs with fire brands fastened to their coats of mail have been set on an enemy's camp with destructive results. Henry VIII must have found dogs useful in military ways, because in English history it is written that he offered the use of 40,000 auxiliaries and 4,000 war dogs to King Charles V of Spain to aid that monarch in his war with Francis I.

In the reign of Queen Elizabeth, when the earl of Essex entered Ireland for the purpose of suppressing insurrection there his army was accompanied by 100 bloodhounds.

S2o Ends Expedition.

Captain Kelsey, leader of the Cape to Cairo motor car expedition, has died as the sequel to the injuries which he received on April 12 while leopard hunting. Thus tragically ends the Cape to Cairo expedition, which started so auspiciously, the king himself receiving its members at Buckingham palace, the Duchess of Argyll christening the car, the governor-general presenting it with a flag, and large bodies of friends in Cape Colony bidding it farewell.

BIT OF HUMAN WRECKAGE

Recrudescence of Former Comrade Inspires Pertinent Comment Concerning Fate.

He came to us like a specter out of the crystal freshness of a perfect morning. His costume was comical, his hands and face smeared with coal dust. A burlesque audience would have promptly accorded him a laugh.

He was panhandling clumsily. In his eyes was agony and on his lips unspeakable grief.

Some of us had known him when he moved as other men, belonging to our world, sharing our traditions, our peculiar diversions, our affection for the work that is our own. His appearance brought a chill, a disturbing anxiety. Whom has destiny marked down for the next spectacular fall? we inquired, each of himself.

He spoke a few words about "going to the source of things." "You learn much en route," he said. Diffidently we gave small coins to him as though it was our shame and not his that he should beg.

No one moralized. To point out external reason is so easy and so silly. One goes up, another down—Kismet.

The rush of work closed in over the memory of his visit. Yet the stored memory, a picture in strong colors, will come up at times and we will wonder where and how he is existing. He belongs out there, in the alleys, on the docks, in evil bars, and nothing can bring him back. Life, having twisted and battered him so cruelly, will not let go, but continues to drag him, helpless, through his private hell.—Detroit News.

Irrigation in Italy.

In Italy irrigation, which dates to the prehistoric days of the Etruscans, has been brought to the greatest perfection. Prof. Luigi Luiggi, president of the Italian Society of Civil Engineers, said last week that without artificial watering the marvelous orange groves, the bountiful orchards and vegetable gardens, which give such valuable products for exportation to central Europe and North America, would yield but scanty revenue to their owners. But especially the broad and luxurious meadows of the valley of the Po—which are intensely green all the year round, and give seven or eight crops of fodder a year—could not exist; barely one or two cuttings of grass could be raised, because the land during the five to seven months of the hot season remains generally without a drop of rain from the sky, while during the winter months many regions of Italy would be flooded by the torrential rains.

KEEP UP THE OLD CUSTOMS

Curious Practices That Have Long Prevailed in Two Aristocratic London Banks.

A New York banker who spends much time abroad and has recently returned was speaking the other day about the amalgamation of the two old private banking houses of London, Coutts and Robarts, and of some of the queer customs which still prevail in them and doubtless will be carried over to the merged institution.

From time immemorial the owners of Coutts's bank have insisted that mustaches and beards must be taboo to all employes and also as far as possible to its customers. The founder of the bank was a firm believer in character reading from the formation of the mouth and always insisted that he must have a free and unobstructed opportunity to study the mouth of either customer or employe and this has been carried on down to the present day. Moreover, it is an unwritten rule that every official of Coutt's must wear a black frock coat and white tie and it is said that the procession from the bank at closing time appears like a delegation of Non-Conformist clergymen.

In the offices of Robarts', antique little lamps, like those pictured in interiors of the olden time, are used for light and for sealing purposes. These lamps are always kept filled with a specially made brand of oil and gas or electric light has never been able to banish these old style lamps from Robarts'. The merger of these two banks was described by the American banker as a wedding of the two aristocrats of the English banking world.

THIS GOAT WAS ON THE JOB

After very carefully avoiding a savage watchdog, chained to the rear of the house he was about to enter, a porch climber came to grief, and narrowly escaped being captured by a pet billy goat in the front yard of the Italian club, says a San Francisco dispatch.

Gaining entrance to the second story by means of a ladder, the burglar collected together $260 in coin, a few gold rings, and odd trinkets, and slid down a porch post to the ground. As his feet touched terra firma, the goat, whose private grazing patch had been invaded, spied the intruder. Also the intruder spied Billy. Then started an unequal foot race for the nearest fence.

The burglar lost—lost the race, great patches of cuticle, the major portion of his clothing, and several teacupfuls of blood. He finally managed to scale the fence, and disappear in the darkness with the loot, which was the property of John Regalia, Antone Rambonio, and Tony Vanoli.

Mrs. E. B. Pond, daughter-in-law of former mayor Pond, of San Francisco, whose local home has been invaded by burglars twice during the past fortnight, attempted to buy the goat from the Italians. He is not for sale, however, although the savage watchdog, which slept through the entire confusion, can be had for the asking.

Money Talks.

Perry Lukens, a well-known New York advertising man, has discovered that he is a philosopher. He mounted a weighing machine the other day and, dropping a cent in the slot, waited for the dial to indicate the exact number of pounds of avoirdupois tissue he was carrying around. But the money stuck and the durned thing wouldn't work. And not having another penny in change Mr. Lukens was about to give the atmosphere the once over, sulphurously speaking, of course, when he noticed that a youngster had hopped on the weighing machine. "I don't weigh anything," said the little fellow when the dial failed to move. "That was because he did not have a penny to put in the slot," explained the advertising man. Right here Mr. Lukens got his philosophical inspiration. "How this applies to every day life when a man hasn't anything," soliloquized he. "No money—therefore he does not weigh anything." Which are profound words of philosophy, especially if you cannot make a touch.

How It Happened.

"He was severely injured in an auto accident, was he not?"

"Quite severely."

"Did he sue the driver of the auto?"

"No, he brought suit against a girl who half a block away stopped to tie her shoe. She was the reason he did not see the auto."

That Was What It Meant.

"Why did you quarrel with your husband?"

"He said I was positively ugly."

"How did he come to use such language?"

"He did not use those exact words; but he said that if I was to murder anyone I would be found guilty."

Appreciation.

"I gave Charley a beautiful new alarm clock for a birthday present," said young Mrs. Torkins.

"Did he appreciate it?"

"Yes, indeed. He thought so much of it that he took it down to his office and locked it in the safe."

Electricity Cheap in Japan.

Electricity is cheap in Japan and the use of the current is becoming very general.

MENACE IN HIGH BUILDINGS

Man Who Should Know Declares That City's Chief Peril Is in Its Skyscrapers.

"Quit building 'skyscrapers,'" was the advice given to the convention of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers by Franklin N. Wentworth of Boston.

Mr. Wentworth, who is secretary of the National Fire Protection association, declared that excessively high buildings are becoming a menace to the larger cities of the country.

"It is said that the up and down traffic on the elevators of New York city is almost as great as the horizontal traffic," said he. "New York city has been very fortunate. No disaster more horrifying could be imagined than that which would occur if New York city should have an earthquake; just enough of a shock to break water mains and gas mains and to snap electric leads. The loss of life would be appalling.

"Imagine the panic that would occur if such a disaster came during the rush hours when 100,000 persons would be in the subways or when panic-stricken occupants of great buildings were attempting to make their way down to the ground.

"The skyscrapers have made the subway a necessity. A great conflagration, such as is possible in New York, would bring the same disastrous results as an earthquake and choke the subways.

"New York is beginning to realize the menace and steps are being taken to limit the height of buildings. Other cities not limited in space as New York is should set a limit on the height of buildings. It does not make a city any greater to have high buildings."

FRESH BEYOND ALL DOUBT

Angler Tells of Fish That Was Cooked In What Might Be Called Record Time.

"Positively the freshest caught fish I ever ate," said an ardent fisherman, "was one I caught in the wilds of Canada. A friend of mine and I were out with a canoe and a light outfit for two weeks' trout fishing. Along late one afternoon we struck a likely-looking stream, made camp for the night, and went to fishing. In half an hour we had our pockets full of trout.

"Then we rolled a couple of stones together, started a fire and put on the frying pan. While my friend was busy with that I said to him I guessed I'd catch a fish or two more while he was cooking.

"In half a minute I had a half-pound trout. I swung this fish out and over him, where he stood by the fire, for him to look at.

"'Hold him so for a minute,' my friend says to me, and I did, just over his head.

"You know there's a way of cleaning a fish by which you remove its head and viscera practically at a touch and my friend knew how. He reached up with his knife to that fish dangling over his head and nicked it in the right spot at the back of its head and then in front at the gills and then he just drew the head and interior fitting away all at once, leaving the fish perfectly cleaned; and then, while it was still dripping with the water from which I had caught it, he dropped this trout in the frying pan.

"You couldn't have fish much fresher caught than that, do you think?"

Killed Snake; Found Gold.

W. E. Noble, a pioneer desert teamster, took a shot at a rattlesnake coiled up close to the road in the Calico country, near Sodaville, Nev., says the Los Angeles Times. Immediately after the shot his curiosity prompted the marksman to look at a rock which had been broken by the bullet after it had passed through the snake's head, and the assay of the rock runs upward of $150 a ton in gold and 900 ounces of silver. At the present time there are 2,500 tons of ore in sight projecting about the surface of the surrounding country, which is included in the claim staked out by Noble.

Fishing for raulers in the mountains near San Bernardino, Cal., is good. Two anglers fishing along a stream in the region of Big Bear lake disturbed two rattlers in a hole in the rocks along the water's edge. Being unable to get at them in any other way, the anglers fastened hooks to the ends of their poles, and after prodding the snakes for awhile the reptiles became mad and struck at their tormentors, whereupon they were caught on the hooks and drawn out of the hole.

The Only Condition.

Bernard Shaw, who, with characteristic impetuosity, has jumped into the music hall discussion, was once asked by an American impresario to go no a lecturing tour in the United States.

"There are," the impressario assured him, "only two great lecture attractions remaining to be exploited in the United States. You are one of them."

"And who is the other?" Mr. Shaw asked.

"The German emperor," was the reply of the impresario, who was engaged on the process known as "buttering."

"Then," said Mr. Shaw, "I'll go on this lecturing tour you suggest on one condition."

"And that is?" asked the impressario eagerly.

"That I appear on the same platform with his majesty," replied Mr. Shaw firmly.

Tony has been wanted for some time but not until now have the authorities been able to serve the desired warrant.

Injured in Runaway.

Oscar Jerhico, an employe of Malakoff Brothers, received a severe jarring when the team he was driving ran away. The horses of this firm are rather spirited. The cause of the runaway was some drifting debris which swirled around the horses heads and frightened them while the driver was not in the wagon. Upon hearing the frightened horses the driver rushed and secured the lines but was drawn a considerable distance before succeeding in halting the wild team. The driver's injuries were not serious.

The Permanent Things.

The Rhine is flowing today as when the ruined castles on its heights were still unbuilt: the waters of Geneva are as blue: the black shadows on the surface of Constance come and go as gently, the pine needle carpets of the forests of the Vosges are as soft; in the Campagna this evening the mellow light will creep over the land to the call of the Angelus as a week, a year, a century ago: the Alps stand immobile, insensate even to the music of their moving glaciers. With them it is today as it was in the beginning

These are the things, says the New York Press editorially, that are permanent: the things that stand above and immune to the consequences of man's criminality, his idiocy, his petty racial antagonisms his outbursts of empty, thoughtless rivalries and jealousies, his insatiable appetite for empire, his futile diplomacy and the wars he summons to his own ruin.

Anklets Like Phonograph Disks.

The women of southern Nigeria wear extraordinary brass anklets, shaped like gramophone records, which are riveted on to their legs at an early age, and are never again taken off Walking in them, as will be readily imagined, is very difficult, and necessitates keeping the legs far apart while running is altogether out of the question The disks are kept highly polished and when the women walk in long files to market the sight of their anklets flashing in the sun excites the envy of their poorer, but more comfortable sisters.—Wide World Magazine.

KIND OF A FAN TO ENVY

He Sits Through the Game Silently, Though All the Time Enjoying It Hugely.

He is young, tall slender, wears blue serge, and even on very cool days in the early spring he goes without an overcoat. Simeon Strunsky writes in the Atlantic He sits out the game with folded arms, very erect, thin lipped and with just the break of a smile around the eyes. He usually comes alone and has little to say. He is not a snob, he will respond to his neighbor's comments in moments of exceptional emotional stress, but he does not wear his heart on his sleeve.

I imagine him sitting in very much the same attitude, in college lecture rooms, or taking instructions from the head of the office. Complete absorption under complete control—he fascinates me While the stout young man behind me chatters on for his own gratification forgetting one moment what he said the moment before—an empty-headed young man with a tendency to profanity as the game goes on—this other trim young figure in blue serge, with folded arms, sits immobile, watching, watching with a calm that must come out of real knowledge and experience, enjoying the thing immensely, but giving no other sign than a sharper glint of the eye, a slight opening of the lips.

In a moment of crisis, being only human, he rises with the rest of us, but deliberately, to follow the course of a high fly down the foul line, far toward the bleachers. When the ball is caught he smiles and sits down and folds his arms. I envy him his capacity for drinking in enjoyment without display. This is the kind of a fan I should like to be.

Was Noted Catholic Prelate.

James Roosevelt Bayley, the predecessor of Cardinal Gibbons as archbishop of Baltimore, was born 100 years ago in Rye, N. Y. He originally intended to make medicine his vocation but abandoned the study at the end of one year, and in 1840 was ordained a priest of the Protestant Episcopal church Assailed by religious doubts he visited Rome in 1841 and was received into the Roman Catholic church. Several years after his return to America he became president of St. John's college, Fordham, N. Y. In 1853 he became first bishop of Newark, N. J. Here he founded Seton Hall college and translated to the archiepiscopal see of Baltimore, the highest honor the church had to offer in the United States
